
Energy Projects

Brown Williams people have had key management and regulatory roles as a part of developing a large variety of important and sizeable projects to strengthen the North American energy grid. Because of this experience, we know how to advise you to make your project succeed. Our capabilities will help you to negotiate with prospective customers, clear regulatory hurdles on time, evaluate options for pricing your project, assist with financing and regulatory accounting issues and help to complete the environmental and business details of necessary regulatory filings. We can also advise you on and testify about the strengths and weaknesses of the applications submitted by other industry participants.
